Triple i's commitment to health and safety extends to staff flu vaccinations

As flu season approaches, it is important for businesses to consider the health and well-being of their employees. As a business Triple i prioritises the health and safety of its employees and our experience shows that we also reap the benefits of providing flu vaccinations to its workforce.

With winter approaching staff were offered the opportunity to be immunised with the new flu vaccination, which would hopefully fend off any chances of becoming ill over the next few months.

A sizeable number of staff participated in the clinic held at our Unanderra premises. Arrangements with a local support partner providing the vaccinations worked efficiently to ensure the clinic was a success for both staff and the company. The clinic was held in conjunction with an early morning BBQ breakfast for staff.

Over the past years' experience, Triple i feel the company has seen a significant benefit and believes the program helps to improve our staff's well-being.

What are the benefits?

Stay Safe

Each year in Australia the flu causes an estimated 180,000 hospital admissions and 300,000 doctor visits. Flu vaccination helps to prevent this.

Stay Well

Minimise sick days – Healthy working adults vaccinated against the flu have almost half the number of doctor's visits and sick days compared to other working adults.

Work Well

Vaccinating your staff reduces the risk of them spreading the flu to their colleagues, family, and friends.

In summary, flu vaccinations are important as they:

1. Keep employees healthy and protected
2. Prevent the spread of the disease
3. Reduce the number of sick days
4. Make employees feel secure

Triple i are committed to the health and safety of its employees. By reducing absenteeism, improving employee morale, saving money, and promoting a culture of health and wellness, Triple i creates a more productive and positive work environment.
